The South Bay Workforce Investment Board recently celebrated the graduation of 28 high school seniors from its Bioscience Pre-Apprenticeship Program.

The apprenticeship took place at Morningside High School, in Inglewood. The annual program helps prepare the students for high-paying jobs in the life sciences sector.

Los Angeles County Supervisor Holly J. Mitchell, who represents the Second District, provided funding for the program. She joined SBWIB Executive Director Jan Vogel in honoring the students on Monday, Dec. 12, as did Margaret Evans, Board of Trustees president for the Inglewood Unified School District; and Arturo Valdez, the school district's county-appointed, interim superintendent.
